Savvy About Superstitions

Though not scientifically proven, superstitions are important to those who believe in them or simply a bit of fun for those who don't. How many of these common beliefs and rituals are you familiar with?

- Prevent jinxing yourself by knocking on wood. Old legends say that good spirits reside in trees, and touching the wood shows gratitude or seeks protection.
- Sporty superstitions include lucky clothing that cannot be washed, growing out a beard to compete better during playoffs, or eating a specific meal to win a game.
- A very common superstition is crossing your fingers. Some think this began as a way to support a friend's wish: Two people, the wisher and the supporter, would cross their index fingers together to make the wish come true.
- Having a cricket in your home is seen as a sign of good fortune. That is, if you can get past the constant chirping!
- If a penny is found heads up, then grab it for good luck. But if it's heads down, better leave it on the ground.
- Certain numbers can be lucky or unlucky. Number 13 falls into the latter category—buildings often don't even have a 13th floor! The fear of this particular number is named triskaidekaphobia.
- Rub that lucky rabbit's foot! This symbol of good luck dates back to the 16th century and is referenced in many cultures.
- Is "beginner's luck" real? Probably not, but new players often feel less pressure to win, which may be an advantage.

Don't Miss This Solar Eclipse!

This month brings an exciting sky event to those of us in the Western Hemisphere. On Oct. 14, a narrow path from the Oregon Coast to the Texas Gulf Coast will experience an annular solar eclipse, and the rest of the continental U.S. will be able to view a partial solar eclipse.

An annular solar eclipse occurs every one to two years, when the moon passes between the sun and Earth. The moon will appear smaller than the sun because it is farther away from Earth than during a total solar eclipse. Because of this, a "ring of fire" will appear behind the moon, as the sun won't be completely blocked out. The partial solar eclipse, however, will reveal the sun as a crescent shape when the moon crosses in front of it because the viewing angle doesn't provide a perfect lineup of the Earth, moon and sun.

Be sure to use protective eyewear when viewing this spectacle. Normal sunglasses aren't appropriate; instead, you'll need special solar eclipse glasses or solar filters if viewing through a telescope, binoculars or camera.

It can be fun to view the eclipse indirectly, too. Create a pinhole projector by simply punching a hole in a piece of paper. Then stand with your back to the sun, hold up the paper and let it project the sun's image onto a wall or clear spot of ground. You can also watch the eclipse online.

Recipe

Chipotle Chicken Flatbreads

Simple flavors shine in this meal that you can make in under 20 minutes.

Ingredients:

- 2 flatbreads
- 2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese
- 1 clove garlic, diced
- 4 chicken tenders, cooked and cubed
- 1 pint cherry tomatoes, quartered
- Salt and pepper, to taste
- 1/2 cup ranch dressing
- 1 1/2 teaspoons chipotle seasoning
- Chopped fresh cilantro (optional)

Directions:

Preheat oven to 350° F.

Place flatbreads on a parchment paper-lined sheet pan. Sprinkle cheese on flatbreads, and then add garlic, chicken and tomatoes. Season each flatbread with salt and pepper, to taste.

Bake flatbreads for 16 minutes or until cheese is melted.

In a small bowl, mix ranch dressing and chipotle seasoning.

Drizzle dressing over cooked flatbreads and garnish with fresh cilantro, if desired.

Wit & Wisdom

“Leaves sway sharp, and through the shadow-swallowed tree-tops the low nocturnal music of the wind makes magic of the vast night.”
 —James Oppenheim

“Time flies over us, but leaves its shadow behind.”
 —Nathaniel Hawthorne

“The poet is like the Earth’s shadow. The sun moves, and the poet writes something down.”
 —Eileen Myles

“Hide not your talents. They for use were made. What’s a sundial in the shade?”
 —Benjamin Franklin

“Shadow owes its birth to light.”
 —John Gay

“Keep your face to the sunshine and you cannot see a shadow.”
 —Helen Keller

“My shadow ... is one way I trace who I was and where I have been. My shadow and I have been on a journey for quite a while now!”
 —Angela Cartwright

“Character is like a tree and reputation like a shadow. The shadow is what we think of it; the tree is the real thing.”
 —Abraham Lincoln

“Poetry is an echo, asking a shadow to dance.”
 —Carl Sandburg

“Hope is like the sun, which, as we journey towards it, casts the shadow of our burden behind us.”
